Makgeolli: The Timeless Korean Rice Wine Making Experience

Have you ever heard of Makgeolli, a traditional Korean alcoholic beverage? While soju and beer are also popular, Makgeolli stands out with its unique characteristics and long history.

Makgeolli is a milky, off-white rice wine with a slightly sweet and tangy flavor. Made from fermented rice, it has a relatively low alcohol content, typically around 6-8%. This beverage has been cherished in Korea for centuries, not only for its taste but also for its cultural significance and health benefits, as it contains probiotics and amino acids.

You can make your own makgeolli, taste it, and even take home a souvenir of your experience. There are spaces available for small groups of 1-2 people as well as larger groups of 40-50 people, so if you come to Korea, be sure to experience it!

Pottery Experience in Korea

There are many workshops in Korea that offer hands-on experience programs. Today, we would like to introduce you to one of them: the pottery experience!

Even if you've never tried pottery before, you can create your own unique dish in a one-day class with the guidance of an instructor. Since pottery takes time to be fired and hardened, it requires some time before you can take your finished piece home. Therefore, this experience is especially recommended for tourists who are on an extended stay!

Decorate it with your own colors and designs!

You can paint your desired pictures and patterns on the pottery you create.

I'd like to briefly introduce our new SIC program, RingKtrip. It's a tour that allows you to travel throughout South Korea, visiting various tourist destinations beyond Seoul and Busan. You can freely choose a one, two, or three-day trip to fit your schedule. This is very useful for FIT customers, those with gaps in their business trip or package tour schedules, or those with time between flights.

A simple guide on RingKtrip reservations is attached please review it. For RingKtrip reservation inquiries, please contact us at the following contacts.
